GEHL ADDS 2109 WINDROW MERGER TO THEIR AGRICULTURAL LINE

(WEST BEND, WISCONSIN) – Gehl Company announces the addition of the 2109 Windrow Merger to its hay tool and forage harvesting product lines. The 2109 Windrow Merger can maximize production capacity by combining windrows in the field, making each pass with a forage harvester or baler more productive. It also reduces fuel costs, man-hours and wear and tear on equipment.

The 2109 Windrow Merger is designed with a proven 9-foot pickup, that lifts crop with a gentle sweeping motion onto the wide belt conveyor. The pickup-drive is hydraulically driven and has a variable-speed flow control, allowing the operator to match pickup speed to ground speed and crop conditions. Material is distributed smoothly and evenly without bunching. The cross conveyor can be tailored to the user's mower conditioner or crop conditions, and moved a total of 24" left or right.

"The 2109 Windrow Merger is another example of a Gehl product that will help our customers increase their productivity and save money," says Andy Strupp, Agricultural Product Manager. "Farmers today are looking for ways to reduce the number of times they go across their fields with their large and more expensive equipment," says Strupp.
